The Centre for Criminal Justice Studies

Established in 1987, the Centre for Criminal Justice Studies (CCJS) is an internationally recognised research unit which provides an active and multidisciplinary academic environment with high quality teaching and research in criminal law, criminal justice studies and criminology.

Our Research

The Centre excels in the production of research that is empirically rich, conceptually sophisticated and policy relevant. Research is interdisciplinary and often comparative in its insights to certain key criminal justice issues. The Centre runs both undergraduate and postgraduate courses in criminal justice studies and criminology and has a large and vibrant research student population. Key research strengths include:

- Behavioural Regulation and Social Order
- Criminal Justice Processes
- Historical Criminology
- International, Comparative and Transnational Criminal Justice
- Policing Security and Governance
- Technologies, Crime and Justice

Research Projects

Recent research projects have explored: anti-social behaviour interventions with young people; influences on eyewitness accuracy; mock jurors' deliberations in rape trials; police bail; the historical development of excise duties to regulate drinking; the effectiveness of electronic monitoring.

Our Staff

Staff have strengths in: criminology, criminal justice and criminal law and procedure, combining commitments to quantitative and qualitative methods in empirical research, as well as socio-legal analysis. Our staff have conducted research for a range of key external funding bodies including: the ESRC, Nuffield Foundation, Joseph Rowntree Foundation, Leverhume Trust, Home Office, Youth Justice Board, Lord Chancellor's Department, National Probation Service, European Commission and others. Such projects sustain the established profile of the Centre as a preeminent research unit, but also ensure that our teaching is at the cutting-edge of contemporary academic and policy debates.

Why study with us?

The School and the CCJS provide a vibrant and stimulating learning environment. The quality of the research-led teaching is widely recognised and welcomed by employers.

Our taught programmes

We offer the following postgraduate taught programmes, as well as the BA Criminal Justice and Criminology programme:

- LLM Criminal Justice and Criminal Law
- MA Criminal Justice and Criminology
- MA Security and Justice
